Program Description

The English major provides a balanced program of introductory and advanced work in English and American literature, world literature in English, English language and linguistics, and writing. The program offers students the chance to engage in a major humanistic discipline, the study of literature, which is challenging and enriching in itself. The English major also provides sound professional training for those interested in high school or college teaching, the teaching of English as a second language, business or technical writing, or graduate work. And the program is an excellent background for students entering professional schools or planning business careers.
The English major offers four concentrations, which have been designed to meet the needs of students with a general interest in literature and of those with special interests in writing or teaching. Students seeking a strong background in literature, history, theory, and analysis should take the general concentration in English, which combines the historical and critical study of literature with innovative approaches to critical methods, women's studies, nontraditional literatures, and non-Western literature in English.
The concentration in English with an emphasis on TESOL (Teaching English to Speakers of Other Languages) provides a combination of advanced work in applied linguistics with training in current methods of language teaching.

[^0]:    This plan outlines a four-year path to graduation. You are expected to satisfy all "success marker" courses, grades, and GPAs as specified. For part-time students and students needing to complete background material, this schedule represents the order in which courses should be taken. This suggested plan to four-year graduation does not replace regular advising appointments. Some course offerings may change.

    ## Notes

    *Group A (British) ENG 3210-3230; B (American) ENG 3310-3320; C (Diversity) 3200-3440. Students must take one survey each from two areas.
     An application for field placement (ED 2650 and 2750) is required one semester in advance. Visit www.cehs.wright.edu/studentinfo/field_experience/index.php for more information and application deadlines. Students admitted to licensure pathway program in junior year must see TESOL licensure advisor for pathway courses to be taken in terms seven and eight. All other students should see ENG advisor for advice.
