

Today's TEDxDayton 2019 talks at the Victoria Theatre find COLA well represented among the speakers. Brandy Foster, director of Wright State's ONEIL Center for Research Communication, is an English department BA and MA. Her speech topic is sharing the value of generalists in a world full of specialists. And Mary Rogero, an accomplished architect who earned her bachelor's of fine arts here, will talk about how kitchens have evolved to take on special importance in home life.

The New Media Incubator folks have been busy on an exciting project in collaboration with the Veteran and Military Center's Veterans' Voices Project. They received an Ohio Humanities grant to support the creation of six short webisodes about different aspects of the veteran experience: Letters Home; Veteran Spouses; Integrity First about the LGBTQ experience; Hiring Veterans; the Vetpreneur; and a final episode on the Veteran experience. A short film will be released each Friday from October 4 through November 8, and all of the episodes will play at the Neon on November 21st.

Our School of Public and International Affairs (SPIA) will present a panel called THE IMPEACHMENT PROCESS: facts, misconceptions, and implications on Thursday, October 17, 12:20-1:30 pm in 109 Oelman. Dr. Ed Fitzgerald will talk about prior impeachments; Dr. Lee Hannah will talk about what it means for members of Congress and the 2020 presidential election; and Dr. Myron Levine will discuss the wording of the U.S. constitution, the framers' intentions, and precedent. The public is invited.

Our department of Theatre, Dance and Motion Pictures got a double dose of good news this week. First, they found out that they were named as one of the top 30 College Acting/Performing Arts Programs for 2019-20 by a prominent national organization. Then BFA Musical Theatre alum Joey Monda '10 received a rave review in the New York Times for the new play he produced, Slave Play. We are so proud!
