

Kaylee Diane Raines is a dedicated scholar and writer, currently in the final semester of her M.A. in English at Wright State University, where she also earned her B.A. in English and International Studies in 2023. Her passion for music began in childhood through choir and a love for musical theater, which continues to inspire her creative and academic pursuits. During a study abroad experience to France in 2024, Kaylee traveled to London to see Moulin Rouge at the Piccadilly Theatre—an unforgettable experience that profoundly impacted her and later inspired her 2025 Silver Melted into Song essay. With published work in The Guardian, The Education Abroad Network, and the forthcoming Palgrave Encyclopedia of Leadership and Change, Kaylee plans to apply to Ph.D. programs in English upon completion of her degree at WSU.
